SICILY SPLIT BY U.S. TWO-WAY DRIVE

In Italy in 10 Days, Says U.S. Senator

SENATOR SCOTT W. LUCAS, a member of the U.S. Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said yesterday at Springfield, Illinois: "The Allies will be in Italy within ten days with a pretty fair-sized army. As soon as the Eighth Army mops up Catania, Sicily's through. Then we'll move into Italy through Messina."

Mr. Patterson, U.S. Acting Secretary for War, said in Washington that the U.S. Seventh Army is in the outskirts of Marsala, the fall of which is imminent. He added that stiff opposition was being encountered by the Eighth Army as Axis forces were concentrating in the north-east corner of Sicily.

"The Axis may be obtaining reinforcements at this point, but in general Sicily has been isolated," he said. "The Allies have complete air control, with more than ten-to-one superiority. Only two or three airfields are still in Axis hands."

Note.—Mr. Patterson's statement is presumably based on later advices than those on which, earlier yesterday, correspondents based the statement that "already some 40 per cent. of Sicily's airfields are in Allied hands."

Morocco Radio stated early to-day: "Marsala has been abandoned by Axis troops."

FOLLOWING the Allies' intensified land, sea and air offensive in the Mediterranean the Sicilian situation early this morning was as follows:—

The fall of Catania in the east and Marsala in the west is reported to be "imminent";

U.S. forces are in Marsala's outskirts;

American troops are only 15 miles from Palermo, the capital, in the north-west, and can already see the Tyrrhenian Sea;

The British Navy has bombarded Crotone Harbour, in the Gulf of Taranto;

Over 40,000 Captured

Bitter fighting continues near Catania;

Over 40,000 Axis prisoners have now been taken.

A Berlin statement says that Axis resistance in the east has stiffened.

(Report of bombardment of Crotone in Columns 1 and 2.)

NEARING NORTH COAST

Reuter's Special Correspondent at Allied H.Q., North Africa, states:—It is clear that Western Sicily is under Allied control. Developments appear to be reaching a climax as German and Italian units still in fighting shape continue to stream back for a stand in the north-eastern corner of the island around Messina and Catania.

American troops, advancing almost unopposed at more than 20 miles a day, are reported to be within 15 miles of Palermo, seaport capital of the island on the North coast. The fall of Marsala, on the extreme westerly point of the island, is believed to be imminent.

MORE CAPTURES

Nowhere in the west is there a sign that Axis resistance is stiffening. Capture of six more important centres, including the vital airfield at Castel Vetrano, only 20 miles south-east of Marsala, was announced yesterday. Only at Catania is there heavy fighting, in which Canadians and British of the Eighth Army are meeting stiff resistance, but are inflicting heavy casualties on the Axis forces, which appear to have been reinforced by paratroops.

The Axis centre is disintegrating, following the capture of Enna. The only serious German opposition in this area has been overcome, and elements of the 15th Panzer Division—parts of which are fighting around Enna and Catania—are now retreating north and east to the hills in the Etna region. Another gain in the heart of Sicily is the capture of Santa Caterina, 12 miles west of Enna.

As shown by the ferocity of the fighting at Catania, the Axis effort is directed towards saving the north-eastern corner. The Messina ferry will then become an even greater bottleneck than at present. Once they reach the Etna line the Axis will have no airfields of importance left. All along the present line the Axis are being pushed back to the mountains, where landing grounds are scarcer and flying conditions more difficult.

KEY PORTS

Capture of the island's western tip will have important naval as well as military significance. It includes the key ports of Palermo, Trapani, and Marsala—which will present the Allies with vital supply ports and deny the Axis bases from which submarines operated against Allied shipping.

To reach their most westerly point at Castel Vetrano, the Americans fought their way 60 miles in three days through mountainous country and thickly-laid minefields. In the wake of the infantry a huge armoured column broke through with heavy-gunned half-track vehicles and Sherman and light tanks. The Americans have also captured Sciacca, an important seaport, and Menei, slightly inland. A fourth town now in their hands is San Stefano Quisquina, a railway town in the mountains about 20 miles inland from Agrigento.

Since the campaign began, more than 40,000 prisoners — including four Generals—have been taken by the Allies. Booty captured at Caltanisetta included 14 locomotives and 100 railway wagons in good condition. Capture of the important town of Ramacca, on the edge of the Catanian Plain, about 20 miles south-west of Catania, indicated an improvement on the 8th Army front. Montgomery's men should now be well clear of the marshland formed by the estuaries of the three rivers which cross the plain.

AXIS LOSSES

Some gains are being made at the Eighth Army's various bridgeheads, and what are officially described as "heavy and serious losses" are being inflicted on the Germans as they put in counter-attacks in rapid succession. The Hermann Goering Grenadiers are known to have been reinforced by parachutist infantry battalions, and the fighting over the whole area north of the Semeto river is growing in intensity. In this sector the battle is confined to a narrow space, and further heavy fighting must be expected.

Algiers radio stated early to-day that American forces were steadily drawing nearer to Palermo.

Allied Warships Shell Italian Port

From Desmond Tighe, Reuter's Special Correspondent with the Mediterranean Fleet.

Wednesday Night (delayed).

ALLIED warships sailed this morning to within 80 miles of Italy's great naval base of Taranto to pump broadsides into the harbour of Crotone, in the toe of Italy, without any interference from Italian warships.

As the force of cruisers and destroyers approached the Gulf of Taranto the commodore had signalled all the ships: "We can expect E-boats when we round the corner." But no E-boats appeared, and the cruisers' six-inch guns carried out a one-sided bombardment of Crotone's harbour and chemical works for five minutes.

Fires shot up in the harbour area, and two shore batteries opened fire. The Italian gunners' aim was bad, however, and no shells fell near the Allied ships. No Axis warships or 'planes were seen, even on the return journey, and the whole force returned safely to base.

It was the first time the Italian mainland had been shelled since Genoa's bombardment in 1940.

It was officially announced at Allied H.Q., North Africa, that a chemical works was hit and a fire started at Crotone. The Navy sustained neither damage nor casualties.

R.A.F. Wellingtons bombed and machine-gunned Crotona airfield shortly before the naval bombardment. It was the first combined operation of the R.A.F. and the Navy against Italy.

Other Wellingtons attacked railway marshalling yards near Napies. No 'planes were lost in either raid.—(Reuter and A.P.)

U.S. Submarine Lost

The U.S. submarine Triton has failed to return from patrol, and must be presumed lost, stated last night's U.S. Navy Department communiqué.

Evacuation of Rome in Progress

THE Rome correspondent of the German News Agency reported last night that, since the raid on Rome, not only is the population of the district directly hit by the raids evacuating as far as possible, but an exodus has begun from other districts. Rome radio gave details of an official evacuation scheme.

The Italian authorities plan to evacuate 300,000 of Rome's 450,000 children under 14 to camps outside the city.

Yesterday's Italian communiqué said:—"At first light this morning a German 'plane destroyed a British twin-engined enemy aircraft which had attempted to machine-gun an aerodrome in Rome."

A supplement says:—"According to further reports to hand, casualties suffered by the population of Rome following the raid on Monday amount to 717 killed and 1,599 injured."

The Pope gave audiences again yesterday for the first time since the raid on Rome.

Rome radio announced last night that Cardinal Capelli had addressed a message to the English clergy protesting against the bombing of Rome.

It was learned at the Department of External Affairs in Dublin yesterday that the Taoiseach has sent a message of sympathy to the Pope.

The Madrid paper Ya, giving an eye-witness account of what happened within the Vatican City during the bombing of Rome, states:—Some employés of the Papal Court sought safety under archways and staircases, while many rushed to towers, windows and other vantage points of the Vatican buildings to watch puffs of smoke in the distant panorama of the city.

All the curtains of the Pope's private office, where the Pontiff was working when the bombing began, were drawn save one. The Pope remained alone, praying, meditating and studying, during the two-hour bombing.

Vatican activity was only partly suspended, and Cardinal Maglione, his two aides, Monseigneurs Montini and Tardini, and their staffs remained working in their offices.—(Reuter and A.P.)

Reinforcements Speeded Up

THE German Overseas News Agency said last night that the movement across the Straits of Messina of German reinforcements to Sicily has been speeded-up.

"The acceleration is going on night and day, despite occasional air attacks," said the German report. "Motor boats are effecting a regular traffic. Artillery on the vessels and Messina A.A. protect them against attacks. British speed-boats tried during the night of Monday to attack German naval forces in the Messina Straits, but were dispersed."

Captain Sertorius said last night that renewed attempts by the Eighth Army to force the crossing of rivers south of Catania with strong tank and infantry forces had failed.—(Reuter.)

3D. BOTTLE OF WINE 8S. 0D. AT RETAIL!

In reply to a question in the British Parliament yesterday Mr. Mabane, Parliamentary Secretary of Food, said that the retail price of 8s. a bottle for Algerian wine—stated to cost the equivalent of 3d.—included duty and other charges.

He hoped it would bring a "small and welcomed profit" to his Department!

Condition of R.I.C. Pensioners

Sir Patrick Hannon (C., Moseley) asked the British Home Secretary yesterday in the House of Commons if he will take into consideration the condition of men in Northern Ireland who served in the R.I.C., which was an armed force to the time of its dissolution, and which passed through a period of open warfare during the disturbances preceding the Irish settlement of 1922, and if, in the review of pensions now taking place, the position of these men will have generous treatment.

Mr. Morrison—"The circumstances to which Sir Patrick Hannon refers were taken into account at the time of the disbandment of the Royal Irish Constabulary, and, having regard to these special circumstances Parliament made special provision for these men in the Constabulary (Ireland) Act, 1922. I know of no reason for revising the provision made by that Act."

Sir Patrick Hannon—"Is not the treatment of these men of the Royal Irish Constabulary one of the most disgraceful episodes in the story of recent Governments?"

No reply was given.

French Admiral Arrested

Admiral Derrien, Naval Prefect of Bizerta during the German occupation, has been arrested, states Reuter's Special Correspondent in Algiers. This follows the court of inquiry set up on May 19 by the French North African authorities in Tunisia to investigate the admiral's activities. At that time he was under open arrest.

Death of Dail Deputy

The death took place yesterday of Mr. Martin Ryan, T.D., of Knockfune, Newport, Co. Tipperary. A farmer by occupation, Mr. Ryan was aged 43 years. Educated at the National School, Newport, he joined the I.R.A. in 1917, and in 1919 was imprisoned by the British Government. He was a member of the North Tipperary County Council since 1925, and was elected Chairman in 1933. He was also a member of the Mental Hospital Committee. Mr. Ryan was re-elected in the recent general election as a member of the Fianna Fail Party.

£14,500,000,000 for War

Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons, London, yesterday, moving a supplementary vote of credit for one thousand million pounds, said the last vote of credit was likely to be exhausted before the end of August. The new vote would cover expenditure until early November. He said:—

"The total of our war expenditure has now reached the prodigious figure of £14,500 millions. The average daily rate of war expenditure since the beginning of April has been £13½ millions."

M.P. Comes To Eire—Ignores Ban

"I GAVE no guarantees about my movements, and I object to any attempt to place me in a separate compartment from any other citizen."

Apart from his desire to spend a holiday with his wife and child in a "nice place," this reason is good enough justification for Mr. John McGovern, the Glasgow Independent Labour M.P., coming into Southern Ireland in defiance of the wishes of the British Home Secretary. It is the second time in three years that he has had a permit to travel to Northern Ireland and has ignored the condition that he should not cross the border. When he returned home on the last occasion there was an official inquiry about his entering the 26 counties. "This time," he said, "there probably will be a bigger row."

In the Great Northern Hotel, Bundoran, where he hopes to enjoy himself till Tuesday next, when he will come to Dublin, Mr. McGovern yesterday talked with an Irish Times reporter on the latest phase in his struggle against "bureaucratic interference." "I think the real trouble behind it all," he said, "is the fact that I am opposed to war, and they consider that anyone opposed to the war effort should not be allowed outside the country. You see, Mr. Morrison is conducting a struggle for freedom and democracy, and"—with a twinkle in his eye—"I am conducting a struggle for freedom and democracy against Morrison. I think it is a piece of impertinence to impose a restriction like that on any individual. It sounds rather strange to find people who are talking about conducting wars for freedom and democracy trying to restrict the freedom of others within their own territory."

NEUTRALITY

How did Mr. McGovern get over the border without a permit? "I just got into the train and came down here; nobody asked me about a permit. There were Customs people who looked at my luggage and identity card, and that was all. I was told in Belfast that I did not need a permit, because I was a British subject."

When asked what he felt about Eire and neutrality, he said he thought that the country that could stay out of the war would benefit tremendously at the end of the war, because there would be a revulsion of public feeling against Governments in the belligerent countries. The British, he added, had spent enormous sums to keep Spain and Turkey out of the war, and it was difficult to see why they should want to keep Northern Ireland in it.

Mr. McGovern thinks it is a wonderful experience to transfer himself temporarily from Glasgow to Bundoran, "because over there you would need to feel like a greyhound and chase your rations, and over here the food simply chases you. If some of my friends in Glasgow heard the waiter asking: 'How many eggs for breakfast?' they would have a fit."

He has made no plans for his Dublin visit, but he hopes to see Mr. de Valera while he is here.

Dublin's Post-war Housing Plans

Plans for the re-development of the entire area lying within Denmark street, Moore street, Henry street and Parnell street, which the City Manager has stated should rank in the forefront of Dublin Corporation's post-war housing programme, were approved at the last meeting of the Housing Committee. They provide for the erection of flats on the main frontages, with market stalls in the centre, as well as scope for a certain amount of industrial development.

At the meeting Mr. P. J. Hernon, City Manager, announced his intention of taking preliminary steps to obtain the necessary compulsory powers for acquiring all the property covered by the plan.

In his report he announced that, because of the difficulty of obtaining picture holders and front garden fencing, it would be necessary to omit their provision for the present in houses now being erected in Crumlin and Cabra. Every effort was being made to cope with the shortage of gas piping and fittings required for installation in their housing schemes. Close on 950 basements certified as unfit for human habitation had already been closed against reoccupation.

Call for Identity Check

Mr. J. W. Nixon (Ind., Woodvale) in the Northern Ireland House of Commons yesterday declared: "There are dozens of spies operating every day and night, and the only check—identity cards with photographs—has not been applied, although it has been suggested in this House. "Identity cards, as at present issued, are not worth the paper they are printed on."

Red Army Pierces Main German Line Near Orel

E.S.B. MAY INCREASE CHARGES

EMPHASIS in the 1942-'43 report of the E.S.B. on the fact that tariffs for electricity had been "increased by only 10 per cent. since the commencement of the emergency" suggests the possibility of another rise in the cost of current.

By reason of restrictions on supply, the revenue at existing prices, the report says, could not be increased. It was forecast that increases in expenditure in the coming year under the heading of capital charges, repairs and maintenance, emergency bonus and staff superannuation, would result in a much heavier deficit than in the past year, when working expenses, interest, repayment of advances, and discharge of capital liabilities, exceeded revenue by £49,171, and the debit balance had been reduced to £13,416 by a transfer from the contingencies reserve, which was now exhausted. Last year the deficit of £121,554 was met wholly out of the contingencies reserve. Gross revenue had increased by £44,938 to £2,236,534, but the aggregate capital expenditure at March 31 last was £17,565,982, and the depreciation fund stood at £3,644,758.

RATIONING

With further deterioration in the quality of coal and insufficiency of supplies, conditions throughout the year continued to be difficult, states the report.

The success of the rationing scheme may be judged from the fact that though there were 10,056 new consumers, sales were down by 29,200,928 units.

Total units generated were 414 millions, of which the Shannon station supplied 294 millions and the Pigeon House station 120 millions.

On the question of rural electrification, it is stated that a comprehensive report was submitted to the Government, dealing with its technical, administrative and financial aspects.

LIFFEY SCHEME

Portions of the mechanical and electrical equipment necessary for the operation of the Liffey scheme had not been delivered. Plans for a hydro-electric development at Leixlip were nearing completion. Further progress had been made in the collection of data towards investigation and possible later development of water power resources, including the greater part of the work necessary for the submission of possible schemes in respect of the River Erne.

Sale of fish from the Shannon fisheries brought in £30,153, an increase of £10,999, and the measures which had been taken during the past few years were slowly proving effective in the improvement of the salmon fisheries.

Tragedy of Belfast Sisters

An inquest will be held on Tuesday next on Edith J. Montgomery (51) and Frances Montgomery (53), sisters, whose bodies were discovered at their residence in Ardenlee Parade, Belfast, on Wednesday night, by their brother, Alfred, who is engaged in the jewellery business in Dublin, and arrived at their house on a visit on Tuesday. On Wednesday evening he went for a walk, and, on returning to the house, found that Edith's head had been smashed with a hammer and that Frances was lying in the yard with her throat cut. Frances had been in ill-health for some time, and it had been arranged that she should see a mental specialist. Edith was in charge of the wholesale department of a publishing company, and in her younger days was a well-known gymnast.

U.S. Casualties 65,136

U.S. casualties up to July 7 totalled 65,136, Mr. Robert Patterson, Acting U.S. Secretary of War, said yesterday in Washington. The figure includes 7,471 killed in action, 673 died of wounds, 17,725 wounded, 21,076 missing, and 18,192 prisoners.—(Reuter.)

EDUCATIONAL REFORM DEMAND BY T.U.C.

EDUCATION for citizenship and the need for a comprehensive social insurance scheme were the prime subjects discussed by the Trades Union Congress at its second session in Cork yesterday.

Congress declared that all the agencies of education, primary, secondary, vocational and university, should be open and free to all, and empowered the National Executive to appoint a special sub-committee to report on the steps necessary to reorganise the educational system and administration for good citizenship.

Moving the resolution, Mr. Michael Colgan (Dublin) said that present-day secondary education was a monopoly of the well-to-do. Children of the workers were handicapped, except for the great work of the Irish Christian Brothers. University qualifications had been given precedence to expert craftmanship in the building industry, said Mr. J. Maher, seconding.

Mr. A. Weldon, Vocational Education Officer, said the immediate problem was the school-leaving age. He advocated raising the age to 16. Their experiment in that direction in Cork had been so successful that the Department had now extended it to Limerick.

Miss Louie Bennett said that there should be education in a course of civics, which had been so successful in other countries. Mr. D. J. Foley, I.N.T.O., said the fault lay, not in their schools, but in the individual citizen.

The Congress also called for the unification of all social insurance schemes, and instructed the incoming National Executive to take steps to have included in a comprehensive scheme family allowances, workmen's compensation, health services, unemployment benefit, old age, widows' and orphans' pensions, funeral benefits, increased provision for blind persons, etc., so that "freedom from want" would be established in Ireland.

SHARP CLASH

Following a sharp clash between delegates of the Dublin Trades Council and members of the National Executive, a motion by Mr. L. Crawford (Dublin Trades Council)—to refer back a paragraph in the National Executive report dealing with relations between the two bodies—was rejected on a show of hands by 132 to 37.

The section of the report dealing with political action was passed, but Mr. Gilbert Lynch (Amalgamated Transport) said he was dissatisfied with what happened during the recent general election. Workers coming from the twenty-six counties and mixing freely with those in the six counties have done more to bring about unity of North and South than has been done by either Government, said Mr. J. Long (Amalgamated Transport). Belfast, supporting a resolution coupled with a paragraph in the National Executive report—"viewing with apprehension statements made by irresponsibles and Government leaders in the six counties in relation to Eire workers in the North."

German overseas radio states that Naples had an air raid lasting six hours early yesterday morning.

Violent Fighting in North

According to the German News Agency, violent fighting is raging in the Leningrad sector.

Two Armies Link Up

The two Russian armies converging on Orel from north and north-east, have broken through the strong German line, and have now linked up across the Moscow-Orel railway, Reuter's message states. Two-thirds of the section of the line from Mtsensk to Orel has been wrested from the Germans as far as the station of Optusha (nine miles north-east of Orel).

Mtsensk is liberated, but it is in ruins.

Some German garrisons, still holding out at isolated points, are being kept going, it is stated, by airborne supplies of food and ammunition.

At the Byelgorod end of the Kurks salient the Germans have been ejected from the main positions they took up during their recent offensive, and are now trying to hold on to intermediary defences. Fighting here is extremely mobile, the message says, and the Germans are trying to prevent Soviet tank columns from isolating and encircling separate strong points.

AIR BATTLES

On the Donetz front, south of the Izyum bridgehead, the Soviet air force is dealing heavy blows to German gun units and strafing troops moving up the roads. South-west of Voroshilovgrad fierce battles for command of the air have been raging for the past two days.

A violent battle in the Orel sector, in which German "Tiger" tanks drove a wedge into the Soviet lines, was described last night by Moscow radio. "All day the battle raged, and it was not till nightfall that resistance was broken. Making the most of the defensive possibilities of the many rivers and streams in the region, the Germans struck along one such water barrier with two infantry regiments, supported by 40 tanks, including "Tigers." They were repulsed, but came on at the Russian flank again, launching ten counter-attacks.

"The tanks which had broken through were encircled and destroyed.

"Another water barrier was forced by Soviet infantry, supported by artillery. Tanks then crossed over and struck deep into the German defences."

600 DIVISIONS

Captain Sertorius, German overseas news commentator, denied again last night that the Russian armies have, at this stage, gained any strategic success. He said: "Flanking attacks against Orel from north and south had gained some ground and local breaks-in, but these were without tactical success. North of Byelgorod the Russians had renewed their attacks with powerful forces, but here, too, the fortunes of war were against them."

The German News Agency quoted a military spokesman's estimate that about 600 divisions have been put into the present operations by the opposing armies. "The Russians," he said, "intend obviously to force a decision this summer by means of their tremendous quantity of massed tanks and other war materials."

Berlin radio said last night that the German lines to the north of Orel had been breached, but that German troops were engaged in cleaning-up operations.

The Soviet communiqué said:—"During Thursday our troops in the Orel-direction encountered stubborn enemy resistance, but continued to move forward, capturing a number of inhabited localities, including the town of Bolkhov.

"During the ten days of our offensive in the Orel direction, our troops have captured the following war material:—372 tanks, 720 guns of various calibres, 800 mortars, 1,400 machine-guns and 128 different types of stores. More than 6,000 German officers and men have been taken prisoner. During the same period our troops have destroyed or damaged 776 tanks, more than 900 aircraft and 882 guns of different calibre. In ten days' fighting the enemy lost in killed alone over 50,000 officers and men.

"In the Byelgorod direction our troops, overcoming enemy resistance and beating off counter-attacks, advanced five to seven kilometres. In the South, in the Donetz basin south of Izyum, and south-west of Voroshilovgrad, fighting of local character went on."

AT LENINGRAD

The German News Agency stated last night that violent fighting has been raging on the ring round Leningrad since yesterday morning.

Mr. Maurice Healy, K.C., of 1 King's Bench Walk, Temple, E.C., left £1,716 (Britain).

£5,100 FOR PICTURE IN DUBLIN

A PORTRAIT by Sir Joshua Reynolds was bought by the Barber Institute of Fine Arts, Birmingham, in Dublin yesterday, for £5,100, when it was auctioned by Messrs. James H. North and Co., at their Grafton street salesrooms. An heirloom of the Robinson family of Rokeby Hall, Dunleer, County Louth, it is a picture of Richard Robinson, D.D., Archbishop of Armagh, Primate and Metropolitan of Ireland, first Lord Rokeby, and builder of Rokeby Hall. The bidder for the Barber Institute was Dr. Thomas Bodkin, who successfully opposed a £5,000 bid by Mr. Lucius O'Callaghan, R.H.A.

Previous to the auction an unsuccessful attempt had been made to obtain the picture for the National Gallery, and, contrary to expectations, this attempt was renewed at yesterday's auction, when £5,500 was offered on behalf of the Gallery. The Barber Institute is a comparatively young gallery, having been founded only four years ago.

The Reynolds, an Irish Times reporter learned, was insured for £10,000, and is a fine example of the artist's work. A three-quarter length painting, it measures 54 inches by 44 inches, and is engraved by J. R. Smith. Two other Reynolds portraits were also sold—one for £206, said to be that of various calibres, 800 mortars, 1,400 machine-guns and 128 different types of stores. More than 6,000 German officers and men have been taken prisoner. During the same period our troops have destroyed or damaged 776 tanks, more than 900 aircraft and 882 guns of different calibre. In ten days' fighting the enemy lost in killed alone over 50,000 officers and men.

U.S. Bombers Big Pacific Raids

THE heaviest raid so far in the South-West Pacific has been made by U.S. bombers on Bairoko Harbour, north of Munda, last Japanese stronghold in the Solomons Islands, which, a U.S. spokesman said yesterday, is within reach of capture.

Reuter's special correspondent, cabling news of the attack, says that 150 of General MacArthur's bombers took part in the raid on the harbour, while other aircraft bombed and heavily machine-gunned the area.

Ground troops, says the U.S. spokesman, are only a few thousand yards from Munda airfield, and making very satisfactory progress. Japanese opposition is steadily deteriorating, he added.

About 50 Japanese planes were destroyed—19 for certain—during an attack by Mitchell medium bombers in the Madang area of New Guinea, while their fighter escort lost two machines.

R.A.F. and U.S. bombers have struck new blows at the Japanese in Burma.

The 10th U.S. Air Force dropped 12 tons of bombs on the Namti Mines near Lashio, the North Burman terminal of the Burma Road, on July 21, and hit three large river boats near Katha.

R.A.F. aircraft damaged seven engines and 76 trucks in Central Burma, while others hit rail targets near Mandalay and at Taungup and Akyab.

When Japanese shipping and harbour works near Haiphong and Hongay, Indo-China, were attacked by the U.S. Air Force on Sunday, says a communiqué from General Stilwell's H.Q., direct hits were scored on a floating dry dock, warehouse areas and barges.

Next day Liberators bombed a cement plant at Haiphong with good results. Warhawks extensively damaged supply dépôts and warehouses at Tengchung on the Salween, and on July 20, during a river sweep in the Hankow area, caused the boilers of three large river tugs to blow up.—(Reuter.)

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF MOTOR VEHICLES

GALWAY RACES

The Minister for Supplies desires to remind motor vehicle owners of the strict prohibition on the use of motor vehicles for attendance at race meetings, and to warn them that serious notice —including revocation of the permit in each case—will be taken of the use of any such vehicle for travelling in connection with the Races to be held in Galway on 28th and 29th July. Owners of hackney vehicles, in particular, are reminded of their obligation to ensure that their vehicles are not misused for this purpose.

Great Finish for the Oaks

SUNTOP, sold to Mr. J. McVey, junior, subsequent to her Irish 1,000 Guineas win, followed up that success by winning the Oaks at the Curragh yesterday for her new owner after one of the best finishes in the history of the race.

It was a personal triumph for Joe Canty, one of our senior jockeys, whose third "classic" score it was this season, and it was largely due to his expert handling that the filly won.

Apart from Fabulous, who struck off badly and never raised a gallop, it was a good start, and as they entered the straight half a dozen of them were there with equal chances. Neartic, full of running from home, went to the front and looked like prevailing, but Canty, after getting out of difficulties, brought Suntop along to win a grand finish by a neck.

Canty completed a treble when, in the Curragh Foal Plate, he beat the strongly fancied Conyngham Lodge débutante, Hello Peter, by three-parts of a length, for to start the day he had won the Scurry on Poolfix.

Gloriana won the Marble Hill Stakes in clever style, and this half-sister to Enchantress is clearly one of the best of this season's juveniles.

GOLDEN JACK AND GALWAY

Golden Jack, favourite for the Galway Plate, may not run at the Western meeting next week.

At the Curragh yesterday Mr. C. A. Rogers, trainer of Miss Dorothy Paget's horse, told our Racing Correspondent that he was in a difficulty for a jockey, as both D. L. Moore and R. J. O'Ryan are on the injured list.

Permission for Mr. P. P. Hogan to ride was refused by the I.N.H.S. Stewards, and Golden Jack must be regarded as a doubtful runner until Miss Paget has made her decision.

The finish of the Irish Oaks at the Curragh yesterday—Suntop winning from Neartic.

Cricket Card

Clontarf, the Cup winners, certainly will be keen to demonstrate that their victory in the knock-out competition was no fluke when they face the League leaders, Phœnix at Castle avenue tomorrow. They are turning out their strongest team, and they are including the promising King's Hospital all-rounder, R. Callan. However, Phœnix will not surrender their unbeaten League record easily, so it should be an interesting tussle with the Phœnix batting strength making the visitors favourites to win.

The most interesting of the other matches should be Merrion against Leinster at Anglesea road. Now that they are out of the running for the championship, Leinster are beginning to show signs of their old batting form, and, as Merrion's batting also has improved considerably, the scoring here may be fairly heavy. With the barest outside chance of a play-off, both Pembroke and Y.M.C.A. will be all out to beat Dublin University and Civil Service respectively, and should do so, as their opponents are so weak in batting.

On Sunday J. C. Boucher is bringing a strong team to Sydney parade to meet Pembroke, and these games generally produce entertaining cricket. The start will be at 11.30, playing going on through the day.

Howell's Fight Record

Denis Howell, popularly known as "Butcher," who is to fight Jack Doyle at Dalymount Park, Dublin, on Friday, August 6, is 27 years of age, and has been fighting professionally since 1936. He has competed in over 50 contests, and suffered but five defeats. Probably his greatest victory was over Martin Thornton in Dublin some years ago, when he knocked out the Connemara heavy-weight in the third round.

Another notable victory for Howell was the k.o. he gained in the ninth round over Babo Hunt, who had an excellent record in Germany, and lost on points to Bob Olin for the cruiser-championship of the world.

GROWTH OF IRISH BANK DEPOSITS

A HUGE increase in deposits is the feature of the reports of the four Irish banks which issue half-yearly statements.

Total deposits at June 30 were £116,459,565—a jump of nearly £14,500,000 compared with the corresponding period of 1942. At this time last year deposits were £8,958,533 greater than in the first half of 1941. The biggest increase under this heading (£6,135,644) was shown by the Munster and Leinster Bank.

Cause of the Increase

This growth of deposits is due to the exceptional conditions under which business is now being conducted. The increasing difficulty of procuring commodities is driving more money into the banks, while alternative outlets for the investment of savings are few and far between.

With the exception of the Provincial Bank, advances and bills discounted continued their downward trend.

A striking increase is shown in investments—particularly those of the Munster and Leinster Bank—which are just twelve million pounds higher than at this time last year.

Combined net profits are £12,847 higher at £221,186.

All the banks are maintaining their dividends at the rates paid for the corresponding period of last year.

The half-yearly meetings are to be held on the following dates :—

Hibernian	July 26
Munster & Leinster	July 28
National	July 29
Provincial	July 28

YOUNG GIRL'S WINDFALL

Whether Jane Hynes, eleven years old, of Hovingham, Yorks, who has inherited one-third of the sundsury estate, valued at £11,000, of her godmother, Mrs. Isabella D'Arcy Hawes, late of the Tivoli Nursing Home, Dun Laoghaire, and formerly of Clifton House, Monkstown, who died on March 22 last, is entitled to any, and if so, to which, specified articles of Mrs. Hawes's jewellery, was the question of the sundsury case, heard by Gavan Duffy in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday.
Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy adjourned the matter on the production of an affidavit dealing with the contents of the room that had been occupied by Mrs. Hawes in the nursing home.
A construction summons was taken out by the executors of Mrs. Hawes's will, Messrs. Cecil G. Stapleton and George C. Stapleton, Molesworth street, Dublin, to have the question determined, and an affidavit of Mr. C. G. Stapleton stated that Mrs. Hawes had been an invalid, and that for some time before her death she had occupied a room in the home. He had been informed by the matron that after the death of Mrs. Hawes she had placed in a grey box in one of the lower drawers of the dressing table a five-stone diamond ring, a gold wedding ring, a gold wristlet watch two gold lorgnettes and a gold match box.
The summons set out a bequest in Mrs. Hawes's will of "a small grey box, containing jewellery, which I keep in one of the lower drawers of my dressing table and which box and the jewellery therein contained I give to my god-child, Jane Hynes."
The question now had arisen whether the bequest to Jane Hynes entitled her to any of the jewellery which was not in the grey box at the time Mrs. Hawes died, but had afterwards been placed in it by the matron, the executors, on account of the infancy of Jane Hynes, not considering that they safely could deal with the jewellery without the assistance of the Court.
One-third of the residuary estate, it was mentioned, had been left in trust for Jane Hynes and two-thirds to Rose and Marcella Kerin.
Mr. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. E. and G. Stapleton) appeared for the executors; Mr. Peart (instructed by Messrs. John R. Peart and Son) for Rose and Marcella Kerin; and Mr. Pringle (instructed by Messrs. Hayes and Sons) for Jane Hynes.

The Orel Offensive

One of the most surprising developments in a war that has been crammed with surprises has been the way in which, during the last few weeks, the Russian Army has been able to turn defence into attack. Shortly before the British and Americans made it clear that they proposed to attempt a landing in Sicily, the Germans in Russia launched a violent offensive against the Kursk salient. Their spokesmen announced that this move had been made in order to forestall a general attack by the Russians; and it looked for a time as if Marshal Timoshenko for once had been caught napping. The first onrush of the German assault yielded local successes, and the world was preparing for a repetition of last summer's history in Russia, when the entire situation was changed in a few hours. The Soviet army delivered a fierce counter-attack, not in the Kursk area, where the momentum of the German offensive was beginning to spend itself, but farther towards the north, against the German salient at Orel, on the River Oka, which is one of the Germans' principal strongholds in Central Russia. It was a brilliantly conceived, and equally brilliantly executed, manœuvre. There is a semi-circular "bulge" around Orel, against which the Russians struck simultaneously from two directions, in an obvious effort to "nip it off," as it were, and, if possible, to entrap the German forces that were holding it. Events moved so rapidly that almost before anybody had time to realise what was happening, the Germans, who had been attacking Kursk, found themselves on the defensive at Orel. According to yesterday's bulletin from Moscow, the two Russian army groups that are attacking Orel have broken through the German defences, and have joined hands along the Orel-Moscow railway. Both sides evidently attach great importance to the operations in this area; for no fewer than 600 divisions are stated to be engaged—a truly fantastic number of men. Furthermore, the Russians also have opened an offensive in the Leningrad sector, which has been quiescent for some time. Captain Sertorius, the German broadcaster, said yesterday that the Russians evidently are trying to force a military decision this summer by the employment of "a tremendous quantity of massed tanks and other military material," and the increasing ferocity of the fighting indicates that both sides are fully alive to the importance of the situation. Neither Russia nor Germany wants another winter campaign; but Germany's tactics in Russia cannot but be influenced by the development of the Anglo-American-Canadian campaign against the Axis in Sicily. The establishment of a second front, albeit on a relatively small scale, has given the Russians the opportunity for which they evidently have been waiting ever since the recapture of Kharkov by the Germans. Their attack on Orel means, in effect, that the Germans hardly will be able to mount a full-scale offensive in the east during the present campaigning season. Their General Staff, for the first time since the outbreak of war, must think now in terms of two fronts on the European continent.

Electricity Charges

The Electricity Supply Board, whose report for 1942-43 is summarised this morning, has weathered a difficult year. It does not say precisely how it proposes to weather 1943-44, but gives a reasonably clear hint. As matters stand, the Board's expenditure on coal—the coal necessary to operate the Pigeon House generating station—is less than it once was; but that apparent advantage is due entirely to the fact that the old quantities of coal are no longer available, and is offset by the increased expenditure on other things—some of which, apparently, is due to the poor quality of such coal as continues to arrive. In addition, the Board cannot look for an increase in revenue at the existing prices. The phrase that matters is "at the existing prices," because it suggests that the E.S.B. is considering an application to the Government for permission to increase its charges to the consumer; and the belief is strengthened by the stress which the report lays on the fact that tariffs have been increased by only 10 per cent. since the beginning of the emergency. Consumers will be wise to anticipate an unpleasant surprise in the near future. We deplore the necessity, but, in justice to the E.S.B., we do not see what other course is open to it unless the Government is prepared to make some concession in the form of a subsidy, or of a remission of liability to the State—in which event the citizen will be the sufferer anyhow. The question is whether the Government ought not to intervene. Might it not be wiser to transfer the burden to that patient ox, "posterity," and to spare this sorely-tried generation?
The pity is that this country did not concentrate on hydro-electric development during the years before the war. There still are people who attack the Shannon development as a "white elephant," mainly on the arguable ground that it cost substantially more than it ought to have cost. Nevertheless, where would the country be to-day without it? Of the 414,000,000 units generated during the past financial year, 294,000,000 came from the Shannon; the remaining 120,000,000 had to be generated by the Pigeon House on inferior, but expensive, coal. If other rivers—notably the Erne and the Liffey — had been harnessed during the years when machinery still could be obtained, the twenty-six counties would be in a happier position to-day—even if their taxes were a little higher. Regrets, however, are useless, and out of place. The necessity is to ensure that another war, or another shortage of coal, will not take Ireland unawares. One of the first tasks of whatever Government is in power when normal trade is resumed must be to set about the development for hydro-electric purposes of every river that can be so developed. It is bad luck that the Liffey scheme has been held up, after it had been started; but we must make certain that no similar misadventures will overtake it in the future. If, as is suggested, negotiations with Northern Ireland are necessary for the proper harnessing of the Erne, those negotiations ought to be undertaken with the least possible delay. We believe that the Electricity Supply Board is genuinely anxious to proceed with a large plan of development. The danger is that its plans may be shelved in the confusion following the war. That must not be allowed to happen.

Planning for Play

The official opening of the first all-boys' playground in Ireland, at Broadstone, by the Lord Mayor of Dublin, received comparatively little publicity; yet in its way it was an important event. There is evidence that the new spirit in regard to education is seeping through to Ireland. In the formative years of a child's life it is not enough that he should be subject to a school discipline until four o'clock in the afternoon, and then be thrown out upon the world for the remainder of the day. For the whole day he has been undergoing an intellectual training—too intellectual, unfort

"Rich but not gaudy—"

Shakespeare's advice about clothes in general can be applied with added force to ties. In no part of his attire has a man more scope for expressing his personality —or greater temptation. Just now at Seale's you'll find a very attractive collection of ties, in designs so well chosen that a man can hardly go wrong in selecting from them. There are:—

Rayon Ties 3/6, 4/6, 4/11, 5/6.
Foulard Silk Ties 6/6.
Wool Cashmere 3/-.
Wool Tweed 3/6.
Macclesfield all Silk Ties (cut from squares).
Atkinson's and Fry's Irish Poplin Ties.

Make her Healthy Happy and Robust!
JESSELS COD LIVER OIL EXTRACT TABLETS WILL HELP HER.
For weak, puny, undeveloped children—and especially those that have Rickets and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones—Cod Liver Oil is the one supreme medicine; nothing like it. But it is nasty and repulsive, and nearly always upsets children's stomachs so now all good chemists sell JESSELS COD LIVER OIL EXTRACT TABLETS at 1/6 and 3/6 a box. They are sugar-coated, and children love them as they do candy. One boy gained 11 lbs. in 7 weeks, and is now healthy and happy. Thousands of other children have grown strong and robust. Only 1/6 and 3/6 per box.

SICILIAN CAMPAIGN

By Our Military Correspondent.

THE Allied capture of Enna—Castro Giovanni on most maps—marks an important stage in the invasion of Sicily. Indeed, it might be regarded as decisive with regard to the defence of Sicily qua Sicily. It is true that a considerable mountain range runs right across the island north of Enna, but it is so close to the northern coast—ten-fifteen miles—that it only leaves a narrow corridor for the defenders. It could not possibly be held in permanence.

In a general way the campaign in Sicily has developed along expected lines. Seeing that the Messina angle was the decisive one, it was only natural for the Allies to put forth their main effort there. Equally naturally, the Axis concentrated their most important defensive means in this eastern sector. The defence has been, on the whole, successful as far as direct attack was concerned; and so the Allies, naturally, increased pressure by their centre and left. The occupation of Enna will now enable them to outflank the Axis disposition in the Catania sector. This may not happen immediately, because the Etna massif is very extensive, but it cannot be long delayed.

AXIS STRATEGY

It seems rather strange that the entire Axis mode of strategy in Sicily has been one of delay. There was no counter-offensive move by a concerted kind; there was no holding of a central reserve—around Enna, precisely—to strike in between the Americans and British. The two tank thrusts, at Gela and Barrafranca, could not be classed under this heading.

It seems possible that the Axis strength in Sicily was not as great as was thought at one time. As far as can be gathered from the communiqués, six divisions have been engaged against the Allies to date—four Italian and two German. It has lately been said that two more Italian divisions were making their way eastward along the northern coast. That would make eight divisions in all, but it may not account for the total Axis strength in the island. The Allies have taken as prisoners the strength of between two and three divisions, and there must have been considerable wastage in killed and wounded. Although Allied progress was fairly rapid, much of the fighting has been stubborn, especially in the later stages.

The only course that now seems open to the Axis is the occupation of a bridgehead position covering the Strait of Messina, pivoting on Catania if it can be held, or moving back towards the north-east to shorten the line. The contingency may have been foreseen and a suitable position prepared in advance. In that case there would be a good prospect of sustained defence: the Kuban bridgehead is a case in point. Even a superior navy could not altogether prevent the necessary transport. On the other hand, no systematic preparation may have been undertaken, in which case the hope of prolonged defence would be greatly lessened.

ITALIAN FLEET

The most important immediate military result of an Allied occupation of Sicily would be the fate of the Italian fleet. If once it is deprived of the free use of the Messina strait, it must perforce remain on one side or the other. As Sir Duncan Campbell said to Alastair Mor MacDonnell at Inverlochy long ago: "It is a choice between two bad choices." The fleet can take post in the Tyrrhenian Sea, cover the Italian mainland from Genoa to Naples, and lend a hand for the defence of Sardinia and Corsica; or it may base itself on Taranto and the Adriatic. For the national defence of Italy the western side is clearly the more important; but for the covering of the Balkans and the entire south-eastern disposition of the Axis, the Adriatic has equally obviously pride of place.

The landsman is inclined to ask: "What will the Italian fleet do," or "What has it done in all this?" In the Sicilian campaign its submarines have taken a toll of Allied transports and men-o'-war that is not negligible, though not sufficient to affect the issue. If surface ships have not been in the picture, it may be by reason of lack of trained crews. Obviously, in face of the great Allied naval superiority, the convoying of troops and material to Africa could only have been accomplished by paying the ordinary market price. We hear a lot about the naval price the Japanese have to pay to hold their Pacific gains. But the attack on Italian communications—admittedly far shorter—was much more intensive and sustained.

Bray Murder Charge Development

There was an unusual development at Bray District Court yesterday in the charge of murder against Patrick Nolan (17), labourer, a native of The Gap, Ballycourcey, Enniscorthy. He was remanded in custody at a previous Court on a charge of murdering Miss Kathleen Byrne (34), a native of Rathdrum, Co. Wicklow, at Coolswinna, Ashford, Co. Wicklow, on Sunday, June 20, by shooting her with a shotgun.

Mr. A. B. Cullen, State Solicitor, said that, under an order made by the Minister for Justice, the accused boy had been transferred from Mountjoy Prison to Grangegorman Mental Hospital, and the prisoner was not, therefore, in a position to come before the Court. If he were subsequently certified to be of sound mind he would be brought back to Mountjoy and would be again brought before the Court.

District Justice Price, stating that the procedure was unusual, recorded that, under the order of the Minister for Justice, the prisoner had been transferred from Mountjoy Prison to Grangegorman Mental Hospital.

Insurance Policy Dispute

On an ex parte application of Mr Michael Binchy, S.C., with whom was Mr M. Danaher (instructed by Mr. Ignatius M. Houlihan), on behalf of Mrs. Kathleen Moloney, Knapsack Cottage, Turnpike road, Ennis, Mr. Justice Haugh, in the High Court yesterday, gave a conditional order of certiorari to bring to the High Court for the purpose of being quashed, an order of the Minister for Industry and Commerce purporting to determine a dispute between Mrs. Moloney and the New Ireland Assurance Company, Ltd.

Mr. Binchy said that the dispute arose by reason of the Assurance Company's having alleged misrepresentation by Mrs. Moloney of the condition of her husband's health when taking out two policies of insurance on his life—one for £54 and one for £45. Mr. Moloney having died, she applied to the company for the money due on the policies, and was informed that she would not be paid, as she had misrepresented the state of her husband's health, and, without her concurrence, the company referred the matter to the Minister. The Minister appointed Mr. Philip O'Donoghue, S.C., to hear the matter. Mrs. Moloney got notice of the inquiry, but did not take any part in it, on the ground that it was not a question for the Minister as misrepresentation had been alleged against her. The Minister made an order in which he awarded costs against Mrs. Moloney, and directed that the premiums paid by her, amounting to £9 odd, should be refunded to her, less costs and expenses.

The grounds of the application for the conditional order were that the Minister's order had been made without jurisdiction, inasmuch as the dispute concerned alleged misrepresentation by Mrs. Moloney and could not validly be determined without her concurrence; and that the order had been made without jurisdiction inasmuch as the Minister had no jurisdiction to order Mrs. Moloney to pay the costs and expenses of the inquiry.

The Herbaceous Border is Worth While

(BY G. O. SHERRARD, B.Sc.)

AT present the herbaceous border is in its full glory, and it is a good time to decide whether such a border would be a desirable feature to add to one's garden, and, if so, what plants to put in it. Briefly stated, the pros and cons with regard to a herbaceous border are as follow: Pros—One can obtain finer colour effects by its means than by any other form of gardening. Without shifting the plants, colour can be maintained from April to November by a suitable arrangement of plants flowering at different times. Once established, it is inexpensive to maintain. The plants used are, for the most part, permanent, and can be propagated without glass. Our climate suits herbaceous plants. Cons—It takes up a fair amount of room; to look effective it should be at least 8ft. wide and 40 yds. long. It calls for a good knowledge of plants and skill in their grouping. Staking and dividing the plants and general maintenance take a considerable time and demand individual attention.

ATTENTION NEEDED

On the whole, I think the pros have it, providing there is room for the border and the owner is interested in herbaceous plants and prepared to give them careful attention. They need this as much as do rock plants, in spite of their great vigour, or, rather, because of it, as they are much inclined to overgrow one another. A rose bed or a bed of antirrhinums once planted needs little care, but there always seems to be work to do in the herbaceous border staking, tying, taking up or planting bulbs, dividing, etc. Still, in my opinion, it is worth it all, and the great variety of plants you can grow in such a border enhances its interest. The border should be sited so that from the chief viewpoint you look along it, and not across it. You do not then notice the gaps caused by plants going out of flower. The border looks best with a background of some kind, either a hedge, a wall of shrubs; a yew hedge looks very fine, but requires space. Where space permits of paired borders with a path between, the path should lead to some definite feature, such as a view, a garden figure, an ornamental gate, or even a seat.

The preparation of the ground should be very thorough, for the strong growing perennials make heavy demands on the food and moisture in the soil. Several of them, notably Michaelmas Daisies and Heleniums, are extremely intolerant of drought, and it is only by giving them a deep, rich bed that they can resist it in light soil. The site of the border, therefore, should be double dug or trenched, and at both levels manure and compost should be dug in, together with some bone meal and artificials, when available.

COLOUR SCHEME

The material at the disposal of the border enthusiast is enormous. Not only does it consist of herbaceous perennials, but bulbous plants and annuals can be used. The last, however, entail extra labour in their raising and planting. The bulbs give colour in early spring when few herbaceous plants bloom, and when they go out of flower the herbaceous clumps almost hide the places they occupied. In planning the border, one must first select the main or dominant plants which give colour each month, and arrange them so that a June flowering plant has next it one to flower in July and another for August and so on.

In April, the Narcissus is the dominant plant, and some of the newer kinds look very striking; they can be supported with spring bedding plants. In May, Tulips give most of the colour at the beginning of the month, succeeded at the end by the Bearded Irises, which flower well into June and have as flowering companions Lupins and Columbines, with which their colours blend admirably. Paeonies, Pyrethrums, Oriental Poppies and Anchusa carry on the colour sequence, and are followed by that prince of border plants, the Delphinium. Liliums Candidum, Croceum and Regale flower at this time, and give the Delphinium admirable support, whilst Lychnis Chalcedonicum brings in a touch of scarlet. By mid-July these go out of flower, and are succeeded by the wonderful range of colours of the Herbaceous Phlox, the Anchusa Superba, and various Erigerons and varieties of Anthemis and that useful border plant, Bupthalmum Salicifolium.

The Heleniums take over dominance towards the end of July, and the first of the Michaelmas daisies, Aster Acris, opens its flowers. Autumn has now set in, and it's chief flowers are the Michaelmas Daisies, Heleniums, Helianthus and Solidago. It is legitimate to plant early flowering Chrysanthemums and Dahlias in the border to flower at this season. I have only mentioned the chief border plants, but there are many others.

Northerners Had Big Hotel Bills

Should a Tourist Traffic Act, passed a month before the war began, and suspended "for the duration of the emergency," be brought into operation immediately?

Many a thousand Northerners who have spent the past two weeks in Southern Ireland would be in favour of such a move; for the Act provides for "the fixing of hotel charges and the standarisation of conditions."

If they have found, an Irish Times reporter learns, that prices have leaped at the sound of their clipped, business-like voices. Hotel bills in some areas were far beyond the high figure anticipated. Meals, also, were dearer than was anticipated, particularly exorbitant prices being paid for plain teas.

An I.T.A. official told our reporter yesterday: "We can deal with cases which concern members of our Association—but no others. We have had some complaints, and these we are investigating. Action will be taken where hotels are found charging more than the prices they have authorised us to quote in our handbooks. In certain cases, however, circumstances justify increases."

To bring the Tourist Traffic Act into force would mean the appointment of inspectors to investigate individual complaints—an extravagance which the authorities do not believe to be justified until Ireland's tourist trade returns to more normal proportions after the war.

Bray Cement Thefts

At Bray District Court yesterday, several men appeared on charges arising out of the alleged theft of cement the property of Bray Urban Council. Peter Byrne, Dargan street, Bray, Council employé, who pleaded guilty to stealing a quantity of cement and slates, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment, with hard labour. John McEvoy, Ardee street, Bray, casual employé, who pleaded guilty to stealing 10 cwt. of cement, and Laurence O'Reilly, Forth view, Sidmonton road, Bray, who pleaded guilty to receiving 27 cwt. of cement, were each sentenced to 14 days' imprisonment.

Charges Against Directors

District Justice McCann, in Dublin yesterday, refused informations in charges against Henry Garcia, 1 Ashdale avenue, Terenure, director, and Sydney Barnett, 21 Lower Kimmage road, Dublin, directors of the Grafton Manufacturing Company, 27 North Lotts, Dublin, of receiving a quantity of cloth knowing it to have been stolen. A charge of facilitating and obtaining by the company of 40 yards of calico contrary to Emergency Powers Order, was dismissed.

£260 Fines on Cloth Buyers

AS this was the first case of the kind, the Court had decided not to impose imprisonment, but to inflict a number of fines.

The Court had taken into consideration the assistance the accused men had given to the Guards and their previous good characters. This was stated by the President at the Special Criminal Court sitting in Collins Barracks yesterday, when he imposed fines of £200 and £60 respectively on Albert Lindy, of Warren street, South Circular road, and David Lindy, his brother-in-law, of Emor street, South Circular road, and Ballina, County Mayo, who had pleaded guilty to charges of obtaining clothing materials without surrendering the appropriate coupons. Albert Lindy pleaded guilty to eight charges and David to four. Both were given a month to pay, or, in default, imprisonment for nine and three months respectively.

Mr. G. Murnaghan, S.C., for the prosecution, said that the accused men were general dealers in February of this year Albert conceived the idea of purchasing piece goods in Ballina and adjoining towns. He purchased about £1,500 worth of these goods in about five weeks. These goods were sent to Dublin, and sold to firms in the clothing trade. In a number of cases Albert Lindy did not surrender coupons to the traders from whom he bought the goods, although required to do so by the Rationing Order.

9,000 COUPONS

Counsel calculated that over 9,000 coupons should have been surrendered. It was regarded by the Department of Supplies as a serious case.

Mr. T. Connolly, for Albert Lindy, said that it would be improper to approach the case with the view that it was a black market case. His client was not familiar with the complicated code that governed the rationing of goods.

Mr. D. Bell, for David Lindy, said that in the transactions in which David had dealt for Albert, the goods concerned were in many instances old goods that would not otherwise have been disposed of at all.

Trade Mark Action Settled

A settlement in a trade mark action of William Hollins and Co., Ltd., Vlyella House, Nottingham, against the Southern Fur Manufacturing Co., Ltd., 21 and 22 Grafton street, Dublin was announced before Mr. Justice Haugh in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday. The action claimed an injunction to restrain the defendant company from infringing the plaintiff company's trade mark, "Vlyella"; an injunction restraining them from passing off articles of clothing not made by the plaintiff company and marked under their trade mark, "Vlyella," as being so made; an injunction restraining them from passing off cloth or stuff not manufactured by the plaintiff company, under their trade mark, "Vlyella," as cloth or stuff so manufactured; and damages.

Mr. Owen Keane, with whom was Mr. Frank Monks, S.C. (instructed by Mr. Ernest Leegan), for Messrs. Hollins and Co., Ltd., said that the defendant company submitted to the three injunctions and consented to judgment for £25, agreed damages, and costs.

Messrs. Porter Morris and Co. were solicitors for the Southern Fur Manufacturing Company, Ltd.

Cork Man's Estate

Patrick O'Brien, retired draper, late of Monabeg, Fermoy, who died on March 22, 1942, aged 85, left personal estate valued at £29,405. In his will he did not deal with his real property, consisting of his residence, Monabeg, since sold for £2,500, and house property in Dublin valued at £1,050, and Mr. Justice Duffy, on a construction summons that came before him in the High Court yesterday, held that it passed to Mr. O'Brien's heir-at-law and nephew, Donogh O'Brien, Bank Agent, Bank of Ireland, Thurles.

Mr. H. J. Moloney, S.C., and Mr. Noel Peart (instructed by Messrs. Richard Rice and Son) appeared for the executors of Mr. O'Brien's will. Most Rev. William Keane, D.D., Bishop of Cloyne, Hugh Woods, Bristol, Bishop of Clifton, and John Lee Pearse square, Fermoy; Mr. Paul McCarthy, S.C., and Mr. Christopher Roche (instructed by Mr. W. E. Gavin Orpen) for Maura Arthur, National Bank House, Lismore, one of the residuary legatees; and Mr. Michael J. Ryan, S.C., and Mr. Kevin Liston (instructed by Messrs. Roger Fox and Co.) for Mr. Donogh O'Brien, another residuary legatee.

Theft of Butter and Eggs

"It is shocking to contemplate how easy it is for employés to take their employer's property and find buyers for it," declared Judge Shannon in the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court yesterday, when imposing a suspensory sentence of twelve months' imprisonment on Myles Cunningham (19), with an address in Parnell street, who had been found guilty of conspiring with others to steal, and with receiving unlawfully, butter worth £5 2/4 and eggs worth £4 4/-, from Messrs. Switzer and Co., Ltd., Grafton street, Dublin, in the latter half of last year. Francis Bell (22), also of Parnell street, who was found guilty of similar charges, was put back for sentence. It was stated that some of the butter had been sold in Moore Market and some of the eggs were being sold when the Guards arrived.

Sweep Prize Action

The Master of the High Court yesterday granted an application of Mr. Fergus O'Connor (instructed by Messrs. M. J. O'Connor and Co.), on behalf of Mrs. Mary MacCool, Alberta, Canada, to have Mr. Justice Hobbs, a judge of the Canadian Courts, appointed to take evidence on commission in her action against Mrs. Florence Larkin, Alberta, claiming £530 won by an Irish Hospitals Sweepstake ticket on the Derby of 1938. Mrs. Larkin was it appeared, the seller of the ticket, and she refused to admit Mrs. MacCool's claim. The appointment was subject to Mr. Justice Hobbs's written consent to act.

Mr. M. McGilligan (instructed by Mr. P. H. O'Reilly), for Hospitals' Trust, Ltd., said that they were anxious to get rid of the money, which had been lodged in Court.

Farmer Fined £150

District Justice Mangan, in Dublin yesterday, fined James Reddy, farmer, Tullow street, Carlow, £100 for having used kerosene on which Customs and Excise duty had not been paid, and £50 for having used the kerosene in a motor lorry, he not being registered as an industrial user of kerosene.

Hugh Kelly, Tullow street, Carlow, driver of the lorry, was fined £3 for using the kerosene in the lorry on the same date while not being registered as an industrial consumer.

The Justice ordered forfeiture of the kerosene, and allowed the defendants three months to pay.

Damages for Injured Cyclists

Settlements were announced in the following actions before Mr. Justice Haugh in the High Court yesterday:—Cornelius Murphy, Civic Guard, Arda-na-Greine, Clonmel, who was knocked off his bicycle by a motor car owned by Dermot O'Connor, Waterford road, Carrick Beg, Carrick-on-Suir, at Davis road, Clonmel, on September 21, 1942, is to be paid £350 and a sum for costs.

Miss Bernadette O'Hanrahan, Mullaghcroghery, Monaghan, who was struck, while cycling, by a motor car of George Wright, Main street, Aughnacloy, on July 25, 1942, is to get £351 and a sum for costs.

After a record of 12 hours 26 minutes non-stop flight from Montreal a Canadian transport 'plane arrived in Britain yesterday. It was the first trans-Atlantic flight in the Canadian Government's new war-time trans-ocean service, says an official announcement.—(Reuter.)

NIGHT WORK LED TO INDIGESTION

War-Worker tells of His "Vest-pocket Remedy"

Night-shifts meant irregular meals. Irregular meals meant indigestion. Indigestion called for a quick and handy remedy—and this is what he found:—

"Each time I was on night-shifts, I suffered from acute indigestion through having my meals in the night. A pal at work told me to try Digestif Rennies, and now I eat heavy dinners in the canteen at midnight and feel no ill-effects whatever."—A. I. S.

Digestif Rennies ended this man's indigestion because of their three-fold action. Rennies contain antacids which neutralise acidity, absorbents which reduce stomach gas, and digestive ferments which actively aid digestion. Rennies dissolve in the mouth. They become active at once, because they reach your stomach full strength — not weakened with water. Each Rennie tablet is individually wrapped, so that you can carry a few loose in pocket or handbag. All Chemists sell Rennies; 7d. and 2/- pkt.

A settlement in a trade mark action of William Hollins and Co., Ltd., Vlyella House, Nottingham, against the Southern Fur Manufacturing Co., Ltd., 21 and 22 Grafton street, Dublin was announced before Mr. Justice Haugh in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday. The action claimed an injunction to restrain the defendant company from infringing the plaintiff company's trade mark, "Vlyella"; an injunction restraining them from passing off articles of clothing not made by the plaintiff company and marked under their trade mark, "Vlyella," as being so made; an injunction restraining them from passing off cloth or stuff not manufactured by the plaintiff company, under their trade mark, "Vlyella," as cloth or stuff so manufactured; and damages.

Mr. Owen Keane, with whom was Mr. Frank Monks, S.C. (instructed by Mr. Ernest Leegan), for Messrs. Hollins and Co., Ltd., said that the defendant company submitted to the three injunctions and consented to judgment for £25, agreed damages, and costs.

Messrs. Porter Morris and Co. were solicitors for the Southern Fur Manufacturing Company, Ltd.

Theft of Butter and Eggs

"It is shocking to contemplate how easy it is for employés to take their employer's property and find buyers for it," declared Judge Shannon in the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court yesterday, when imposing a suspensory sentence of twelve months' imprisonment on Myles Cunningham (19), with an address in Parnell street, who had been found guilty of conspiring with others to steal, and with receiving unlawfully, butter worth £5 2/4 and eggs worth £4 4/-, from Messrs. Switzer and Co., Ltd., Grafton street, Dublin, in the latter half of last year. Francis Bell (22), also of Parnell street, who was found guilty of similar charges, was put back for sentence. It was stated that some of the butter had been sold in Moore Market and some of the eggs were being sold when the Guards arrived.

Sweep Prize Action

The Master of the High Court yesterday granted an application of Mr. Fergus O'Connor (instructed by Messrs. M. J. O'Connor and Co.), on behalf of Mrs. Mary MacCool, Alberta, Canada, to have Mr. Justice Hobbs, a judge of the Canadian Courts, appointed to take evidence on commission in her action against Mrs. Florence Larkin, Alberta, claiming £530 won by an Irish Hospitals Sweepstake ticket on the Derby of 1938. Mrs. Larkin was it appeared, the seller of the ticket, and she refused to admit Mrs. MacCool's claim. The appointment was subject to Mr. Justice Hobbs's written consent to act.

Mr. M. McGilligan (instructed by Mr. P. H. O'Reilly), for Hospitals' Trust, Ltd., said that they were anxious to get rid of the money, which had been lodged in Court.

Farmer Fined £150

District Justice Mangan, in Dublin yesterday, fined James Reddy, farmer, Tullow street, Carlow, £100 for having used kerosene on which Customs and Excise duty had not been paid, and £50 for having used the kerosene in a motor lorry, he not being registered as an industrial user of kerosene.

Hugh Kelly, Tullow street, Carlow, driver of the lorry, was fined £3 for using the kerosene in the lorry on the same date while not being registered as an industrial consumer.

The Justice ordered forfeiture of the kerosene, and allowed the defendants three months to pay.

Baldoyle Programme

THE Baldoyle Derby winner, Scots Guard, will be seen out at the Sutton venue to-day in the Metropolitan Handicap, and, as he comes from a stable in form, his chance must be an excellent one. However, preference is given FATHER KNAPP, who showed up well in the Baldoyle "classic," and who now meets Scots Guard on very favourable terms.

Glengriger ran very disappointingly last Saturday, and would have to show considerable improvement to win the Sheilmartin Plate, in which a confident vote is given LOADED DICE, who was beaten only narrowly by Queen of the Jungle in the Patriotic Plate here a few weeks ago. Selections:—

Malahide Hurdle—Sea Mist.
Killester Plate—Magic Bridge.
Holiday 'Chase—Sarawaki.
Metropolitan Summer Handicap—Father Knapp.
Sheilmartin Plate—Loaded Dice.
Corinthian Plate—Donizetti.
Balgriffin Handicap—Hydora.

TO-DAY'S YACHTING ARRANGEMENTS

This is the "At Home" day of the very sporting Sutton Dinghy Club, and, with high water at 6.26 p.m., theirs will be mainly a late afternoon and early evening fixture, the first event (the first of six) race being at 4.55 p.m., and the last at 5.30 p.m. Everything must be over by 8.30 p.m., and the first boat in each race through the winning line by 8 o'clock. This fixture takes the Mermaids and Water Wags away from Dun Laoghaire for the afternoon, and similarly a R.A.Y.C. corinthian match for 17-Footers at Howth still further reduces to-day's B.R.S.C. programme. In the bay proper only the Cruisers and 21-Footers are left, both Sections I and II of the former competing for the Commodore's prizes. First guns and handicaps are Cruisers, Section I, Aranna (scr.), Punctilio (5), Mavis (9), Nepenthe (12), Acushla (14), Section II, Windward (scr.), Sonia, Tumbler, Vega (2), Eyra, Bonita (4), Mercia (7), Foam (10), Highflyer (14), Boneen (17), Happy Days (19), Scallywag (21), 21-Footers—Maureen (scr.), Geraldine (5), Estelle (6), Oola (7), Innisfallen, Nancen (8), Garavoge (9).

Advance in Sicily

The final battle for Sicily, according to Reuter, is being joined. Allied forces now occupy two-thirds of the island, and the Axis defenders are penned into the north-eastern angle. The main effort on both sides continues to centre around Catania, where General Montgomery, with his veterans of the Eighth British Army, is reported by Vichy to be preparing for a decisive assault. Westward, it is announced that the Canadian forces which occupied Enna some days ago have pushed onward as far as Leonforte, and, apparently, hope to outflank the Axis troops somewhere to the north of Catania. The way is being smoothed for them by intensive bombing of Aderno, Paterno, and other towns to the west of Mount Etna. Yet the most conspicuous advance of all has been made by the American units that were given responsibility for the western segment of Sicily. They have occupied Palermo, the capital, which is said to have been evacuated by its Axis garrison, as well as Trapani, and the port of Marsala, in the extreme west. A curious parallel exists between the military condition of Sicily, as it is now, and the course of affairs in Tunisia during the last week or so before the expulsion of Axis power therefrom. Then, General Montgomery was directing the main effort along a coast road running from south to north, while Allied units were striving to break through from the west, and cut off the retreat of the Germans and Italians. To-day the same thing is happening. Once again the British Eighth Army is faced with the problem of a frontal attack, while subordinate advances—if they may be so described—are being made from the west. A decisive factor in Tunisia was the Allied superiority in the air. The Allied superiority on this occasion seems to be even greater. Both on and behind the front British and American aircraft are occupied with relentless persistency, and, as the news goes from all sources, meet with little or no effective opposition.

During the early stages of this war all the planning was done by the Germans. When they attacked—in Poland, in the Low Countries, in Greece, in Crete—every detail was worked out to a nicety; nothing was left to chance; a sufficiency of troops was employed; the air arm was put to proper use. In comparison, the activities of the Allies were muddled, amateur, inefficient. The Allies, however, have profited by their hard lessons. When eventually they decided to fight for North Africa, they made no mistake about it, and the course of the Sicilian campaign—which began precisely a fortnight ago—shows how seriously, and with what thought and preparation, they have tackled their latest job. Economy no longer counts. They have rid themselves of the old doctrine—gratifying, but frequently ineffective—that one Briton or American is worth half a dozen of any other race. By all accounts, they possess a numerical superiority in Sicily; yet they continue to pour men in as rapidly as those men can be ferried from North Africa to the occupied ports, and they are doing everything in their power to prevent the arrival of Axis reinforcements from Italy. Just as the Germans kept on bombing Warsaw while their Panzer divisions were racing across the plains and marshes of Poland, so the Allies are bombing Naples, Reggio, Messina—all the bases from which, and through which, supplies of men and material can be brought to the invaded island. It would be wrong to suggest that the conquest of Sicily is a foregone conclusion; nothing in war is a foregone conclusion. Nevertheless, the remarkable speed of the Allied advance in a region which, though an island, is, to all intents and purposes, part and parcel of the European Fortress, would seem to augur an early and successful conclusion of the present campaign. What the next stage will be in the Allies' counter-offensive is one of their secrets. The American Press evidently believes that an attack on Sardinia is due, and this belief is strengthened by General Eisenhower's proclamation, a fortnight ago, to the people of France. Sardinia or Italy, however—who can tell?

A Living Language

Proof that even a "dead" language still may have its moments of resurrection is supplied by a recent letter in an English newspaper. The writer, commenting on the suggestion that Latin should be allowed to re-emerge as a living tongue, mentions that he has often been able to comprehend the ideas of Polish architects, when they were unable to put them clearly in English, through "their ready use of Latin words and phrases." Travellers marooned in foreign lands often have found a few Latin words to be of great assistance, and prisoners of war of mixed nationalities have been known to converse through the same medium, if not with the same fluency, as Cicero's. The difficulty, of course, is pronunciation. The Italian pronounces Latin as if it were Italian, the German as if it were German, and the Englishman—of the old school, at least—as if it were English. Naturally enough, it is impossible to prove in what way the Romans spoke Latin; and consequently it is quite possible for two scholars to talk together, each in what he thinks to be an unimpeachable Palatine accent, without either understanding a word of the other's speech. Nevertheless, there is something to be said for making Latin a common tongue for international intercourse. It is the foundation of schooling in most countries, the foundation of the language in many; and it is in its own right a fine, forcible and exact tongue. In any case, if Latin is a dead language, when did it die? Was it dead when Abelard used it for his hymns, or the Archpoet to revel in the recital of his sins? Was it dead when churchmen and scholars employed it? Was it dead when Milton wrote his verses in it—and is it dead even now, when cultured men turn Latin couplets with a zeal not merely antiquarian, but inspired by the beauty of form? Cornish, Gaulish, Hittite are dead; Latin enjoys a life beyond life. Post-war diplomacy, one feels, might find it useful. "It is a language," says Bacon, "wherein a man shall not be enticed to hunt after words, but matter." Could there be any greater recommendation for a language of statesmen?

Baleine Bonne Femme

A shortage of meat in the United States has led to the establishment of a queer industry. Since neither fish, nor even good red herring—much less flesh—is available for the table, a substitute has been found in whale meat. Whale steaks, it is reported, are popular already along the west coast, and it is expected that they will soon be on sale as far inland as Chicago. One wonders what will be the reaction of that great stockyard city to the appearance of Leviathan on the dining table. It is reasonably certain that even Chicago cannot attempt to can him in tomato sauce; but select portions—finest middle-cut whale—may be put up in handy packings for the benefit of the quick-lunch counter. There is nothing, indeed, intrinsically curious about eating whale. Eskimos eat seals, and presumably whale as well; among the Chinese shark's-fin soup is esteemed as a notable delicacy; and perhaps even the duck-billed platypus may be favoured as the Australian aborigine's Sunday roast. One ought not to marvel at the appearance of whale on the menu, but rather to deplore the fact that it has appeared so late. Food is attractive mainly by its variety; and any additions to a diet—especially a war-time diet—are to be welcomed. One wonders whether a little initiative might not be a good thing here in Ireland. It might be too much to expect local housewives to rush out with their carving-knives in order to make full use of the occasional whales that are washed up on our shores; but what attempt has ever been made to profit by the food values of the more common basking-shark? Has the vitamin content of the jelly-fish been investigated? Admittedly, he is not a very attractive or appetising object in his natural state; neither is a snail; but sauce on the plate and French on the menu can form an effective camouflage. Somebody, after all, must have been the first to eat tripe. Ireland stands in need of a gastronomical association—a group of enterprising eaters who might investigate the untapped culinary riches of this island. Can we not make a nation-wide delicacy even of the drisheen?

OBITUARY

PROFESSOR STOCKLEY

Professor William F. P. Stockley, M.A., D.Litt., a well-known classical scholar, author and member of the Second Dail, died yesterday at his home, Arundel, Ballintemple, Cork. He was 84.

After graduating in 1886 from Dublin University, he went to Canada, where he spent 20 years.

In that country he held the Chair of English at the Universities of New Brunswick and Ottawa before becoming headmaster of St. Mary's College, Nova Scotia. He returned to Ireland in 1905 to become Emeritus Professor of English at U.C.C., a Chair he occupied until his retirement in 1930.

Always a staunch nationalist, Professor Stockley joined the Sinn Fein movement in 1916, was elected in the general election of 1918 for the National University of Ireland constituency, and sat in the Dail which assembled in 1919, and was one of those who voted against the Treaty. From 1913 to 1915 he was President of the Cork Literary and Scientific Society; from 1913 to 1930, President of the Cork Library, and from 1920 to 1925, an Alderman of Cork Corporation.

Born at Templeogue, Co. Dublin, in 1859, Professor Stockley was the son of John Surtees Stockley, R.H.A., and Alicia, daughter of Joseph Gabbett, Co. Limerick. In 1892, he married Violet, daughter of William Osborne, R.H.A., Dublin, who died a year later, and in 1908 married Marie Germaine, daughter of Kgl. Hofrat Max Kolb, Royal Botanic Gardens, Munich, who survives him. Professor Stockley is also survived by his daughters, Miss Violet Stockley, M.A., a member of the professorial staff of the Ladies' College, Cheltenham, England; Mrs. Seamus Mallin Dublin, and his brother, the Rev. Canon Stockley, Canon of Lichfield Cathedral, England.

Professor Stockley was the author of several books, including:—"English Visitors to Ireland from Raleigh to Newman," "Newman, Education and Ireland," "Studies in Irish Biography," "Introduction to the Dream of Gerontius," etc.

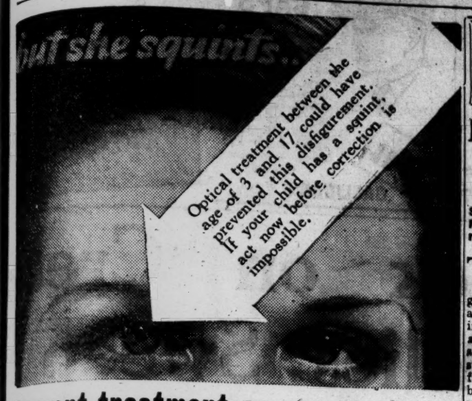
DIPLOMA IN ANÆSTHETICS



Prompt treatment can prevent this

A squint is not only an embarassing personal condition; it imposes an enormous strain on the normal eye, thus impairing visual power. It must be promptly and skilfully treated by experienced opticians. With the finest diagnostic equipment in the world, we'd be glad to give your children's eyes a thorough examination and a full report on their condition.

THE KERATOMETER
The KERATOMETER is the most accurate apparatus known for diagnosing the precise degree of astigmatism—one of the most prevalent defects in eyesight to-day.

Thousands of people suffer from their eyes and do not know it. Headaches, dizziness, irritability are frequently symptomatic of optical disorders, and should not be neglected. Regular examination—at least once a year—is vital if you want to ensure a lifetime of good sight. As our clientele is so enormous that we often find it difficult to attend to customers without delay, please facilitate prompt service by making an appointment at least two days in advance, if possible.

People's Homes

By Sheila May.

People's Homes. Advertising Service Guild's Report, conducted by Mass-Observation. John Murray. 10/- net.

THE motive behind this report is a useful and sensible one; it is designed as a cautionary guide to post-war town-planners and architects. To a limited extent and in a somewhat negative way it is successful. The compilers themselves make no wide claims for this study—"It is merely a contribution from a special, limited and unbiassed angle." Four types of working-class dwellings are examined, and the inhabitants subjected to a questionnaire:—1, old houses; 2, garden cities; 3, municipal housing estates; 4, modern flats.

As might have been expected, the housing estates are the most popular and old houses are most disliked. Most of the criticisms advanced by the people interviewed (mainly housewives) are concerned with detail rather than broad outline—the wish for a separate lavatory and bathroom, their own private front door, larger kitchens, labour-saving devices, etc. From this the authors deduce that "most people are broadly satisfied with their homes. Three-quarters of the present sample like and only one person in seven actively dislikes, their house or flat."

With this deduction I thoroughly disagree. I have met housewives living in the filthiest and most dilapidated slums in Dublin who said: "If only the roof didn't leak like this, I'd ask for nothing better," or "If only the bugs were gone, this place would be like heaven." The mind clutches at the greatest evil and stops there; but, remove that, and the imagination will progress to the next discomfort and rest there until that, in its turn, is banished.

If you had asked an eighteenth-century traveller to suggest improvements in transport, he might have suggested various small alterations in the stagecoach, but he would not have imagined such drastic changes as the Flying Scotsman or the Yankee Clipper. In the same way, a housewife who asks for wallpaper in preference to bare walls has never known, and cannot imagine shiny-surfaced bakelite walls, which need only a wipe from a wet duster to keep them spotlessly clean. And the flat-dweller who connects life in a block of flats with countless stairs, no privacy, and the continual squalling of children, could hardly be expected to visualise a block of self-contained sound-proof flats, each with its own garden space open to the sun and air from two sides—the whole building supplied with lifts and executed in modern plastic material.

But although a book like this has no final contribution to make, and is not even as well ordered and presented as, for instance, "Our Towns," it does serve a useful purpose. It keeps the minds of the country on matters of housing and town-planning, which is a very useful mission, particularly in Dublin, where slum clearance is so long overdue. All interested parties ought to read it. It may make them think.

Miscellaneous

Tales from Beetive Bridge. By Mary Lavin. Michael Joseph. 8/6 net.

ALTHOUGH this slender volume is Mary Lavin's first book, the short stories it contains represent the writing of a master craftsman, who shows every sign of becoming one of the most distinguished Irish writers of our generation. They have a vividness, a mastery of dialogue and imagery, and a gripping power which makes it impossible to set a story down once it has been begun. They have, in fact, a haunting quality, which remains long after any commonplace short story has been forgotten. All the stories are solidly based in Irish character, and represent very different facets of Irish life, though there is more of harshness, disgust and narrowness than there is of happiness and gaiety. They combine the stark realism of the Irish soil with the international literary conventions of to-day, and, although intensely local in their background, they show the effect of general European and American tendencies.

The Honeywood File. By H. B. Cresswell. Faber and Faber. 7/6 net.

This volume, by the author of "Grig," is a collection of the letters on the file of an architect, one Spinlove, concerning the building of Honeywood Grange. The author is obviously an expert, and his work should be invaluable as a guide and a warning both to those who build houses and to those for whom houses are built; but the charm of the book rests on nothing so dry as this. Mr. Cresswell has the gift of making a bathroom step or a load of facing bricks an exciting and important piece of plot; and through the letters he unfolds, bit by bit, such a rich set of characters—the wordy Brash, the solidly English Grigblay, the evil Potch, Bloggs, the forthright foreman, and the slightly unsteady Spinlove himself—as must delight any connoisseur of humour. The author's caustic commentary upon the correspondence is a joy. This book can be recommended thoroughly.

Teach Yourself Shorthand. By Ernest W. Crockett and F. Aldington Symonds. English Universities Press. 3/- net.

This latest addition to the popular E.U.P. Teach Yourself Books is an exposition of the Gregg System of shorthand writing, published by arrangement with Dr. John Robert Gregg, the inventor of the system. In the main, it is the same as the Gregg manual, but the matter is more clearly set out for the purpose of self-instruction, and, what is more important to the average reader, the book is printed in an attractive format, and looks less like a school text-book than the official Gregg manual.

British Shells. By F. Martin Duncan. King Penguin, 1/6 net.

An attractive little book containing brief descriptions in non-technical language of the appearance and habits of some of our most familiar shell-dwellers. Some of those described are to be found on land, others in fresh water, but the majority are to be found on the seashore. This little book will enable ramblers on the seashore to identify shells, and will reveal some interesting facts concerning the life and habits of the original owners. The text is supported by sixteen beautifully coloured plates containing over eighty different figures.

That Was Yesterday. By Diana Ridley. Ward Lock. 8/6 net.

This novel is really a study in the evolution of the love-life of a not very sensible girl. Sara Boyd is impulsive and romantic, and it takes two unhappy affairs to knock a sufficiency of sense into her pretty head and enable her to live on reasonable terms with a sound and thoroughly respectable husband. The book is interesting, and the plot, though ordinary enough, is so well worked out that the tale really pleases.

Chapters from an Autobiography

By Seumas O'Sullivan.

ANOTHER frequenter of the bookshops at this time was Edward Dowden, with his black caped coat, his fine features, his "Chaucerian" beard as someone has recently described it in a well-chosen epithet. I had often stood beside him as he examined the volumes displayed on the carts, and I used to fancy, probably without any reason, that he occasionally glanced at me as I lifted some calf-bound volume. It was not until some years later that I actually had the great joy and privilege of meeting him and listening to his exquisitely modulated voice, his carefully chosen words. Then, on an afternoon which will always be a treasured date in my calendar of the past, I was brought to his house in Highfield road by John Yeats, the painter, father of W. B. and Jack B. Yeats.

I had always heard it said that Dowden had but little interest in the writing of the younger Irish school. Later I was to learn that he had been one of the first critics to hail and appreciate that small, immortal book, "Homeward: Songs by the Way," but I must confess that I was both surprised and, perhaps, embarrassed to hear him, on the occasion of my first visit to his house, speak with kindly approval of an article on some Irish poet of the eighteenth century, which I had that week contributed to the pages of The United Irishman, That Dowden, the uncompromising Unionist, was a reader of such a paper was a shock. Such a shock as I experienced when my friend, Arthur Griffith, confided to me, on one of those Saturday afternoon outings which he so enjoyed, that his most valuable contributions on financial subjects which he had published in his paper were the work of a North of Ireland Orange leader.

The Kindly Scholar

On the occasion of a later visit to Dowden's house, I was, with all the temerity of youth, engaged in the editing of a rather obscure poet of the post-Elizabethan days. One of his works had successfully evaded my search. It was not in the library of Trinity College. It was not in the National Library. But Dowden had a copy; and I can never forget the thrill I experienced when, on my departure, he handed me the precious little volume and said: "You might care to take this home with you, and read it at your leisure." Perhaps, after all, he had not really noticed me amongst the collectors at the bookcarts! Almost my last meeting with the kindly scholar was, appropriately enough, at the same place where I had first seen him. The halcyon days of the carts had long since vanished. The long line of those carts, which I have tried to describe, had dwindled down to three wretched survivors.

We examined the books in company, and as we parted after our comparatively fruitless search, he turned to me and said: "I think that you and I are rather like the Leech-gatherer in Wordsworth's poem—we still stir the pools, but the leeches grow fewer and fewer." I still possess the little lithograph of Wordsworth, one of a few copies which he had struck off for Wordsworthian enthusiasts, and a charming letter, which accompanied the gift, and expressed the wish that it was "worthier of acceptance."

Dr. Grosart

Although I never actually met, or spoke to, Dr. Grosart, the appearance of the small, grey-bearded clergyman was familiar to me, for we had spent many hours in looking through a vast collection of rare hymn books—the library of the hymnologist Eberle, which for a long time occupied a considerable portion of a room in Webb's shop. Grosart's editions of the English poets were known to me, and I had already acquired a fair number of the 200 volumes for which he was responsible.

They were, for the most part, printed in strictly limited editions such as The Fullers Worthies or Chertsey Worthies Library, and are very seldom to be met with to day. Some years earlier I had read through most of them in The National Library, and I am sure that the overworked, but ever courteous assistants in the Kildare street institution must often have looked with disapproval on the small boy who caused those huge volumes of Greene and Donne, Nash and others of the poets and dramatists to be dragged out of the obscurity of the inner regions to satisfy his almost insatiable thirst for these old vintages.

Grosart was one of the most devoted and tireless of scholars, and he undoubtedly succeeded in saving from oblivion much fine work; but as an editor, his methods would not find favour in a more exacting day, and, as Dowden once said to me in reference to one of his editions which I had just picked up, "I am afraid that it will have to be done again."

Dr. Knott, fine scholar and insatiable collector of those items which the booksellers catalogue as curiosæ, was also well known to me, as he moved slowly down the bookcarts—tall-hatted, and with the inseparable handbag which never went home empty. But some of his purchases did not fit into the bag: and these huge folios were the object of my especial interest and envy as I saw them carried off beneath his arm. A few of them, bearing his well-known autograph in red ink, are now amongst my books.

A Character

Across the Liffey, and close to the Metal Bridge, dwelt in those days another and very different type of bookseller, whose shop held almost as much of terror as it did of allures—at least for the young and timid collector. Its proprietor's face resembled nothing so much as a wisp of exceedingly dirty hay, for the hair on his face was not confined to that part which is usually associated with the hirsute appendage, but sprouted wildly and most profusely from ears and nose. Michael Hickey was definitely a "character." My first meeting with him, my first entrance into his shop, my first attempt to purchase a book constitute an occasion of which the memory remains—vivid, and "not from terror unremoved" to the present day.

I had already developed the rather reprehensible habit of turning northward instead of southward on my release from school. The bookshops were a magnet which drew me with irresistible attraction away from the meal which I knew awaited me at my home. I had often viewed with longing the vast store of volumes which thronged the dusty windows of the chaotic quayside shop and overflowed into the 6d. or 1s. "trays," but the fearsome expression on the face of the shaggy proprietor had, so far, deterred my timid steps. On this occasion, however, I summoned up the necessary bravado, and bent above the cheapest section of the volumes displayed. With my "brave new world about me" I selected a book, and extracting from my otherwise empty pocket the required purchase money—it was sixpence—I walked into the dark and fearsome interior of the shop and confronted the shaggy Polyphemus of the caverned gloom. Trembling, I handed over the selected volume, and with it my treasured coin. Hickey took no notice whatever of the money, but, taking the book to the light of the doorway, he examined it with knitbrows. After a moment—it seemed to me an eternity—he walked over to a small desk which stood within the shadows. This he unlocked, and, after placing the little volume carefully within it and re-locking the desk, turned to me and said: "For a young fellow, you have a very pretty taste in books." Almost heartbroken I pocketed my rejected sixpence and left the place. Looking back at the incident after fifty years, I cannot altogether blame the old ruffian, for the volume which I had selected from the "sixpenny cart" was a first edition of the Lyrical Ballads!

Later, much later, I learned to overcome my terrors. Learned also, the secret of that curious bookman. Hickey, it seemed, was not merely a bookman. He had other interests in life, or to be accurate, in the night life of the Dublin of his day. And on the success or failure of those nights of his depended, to a great extent, his dealings with customers on the following morning. If he appeared in his shop with boots unlaced it was simply and irrevocably a question of "Thumbs down" for all and sundry. If, on the other hand, he showed up with boots neatly polished and laced, one might extend the proffered sixpence or shilling with every hope of a completed sale. So that, in common with many other collectors, I very soon "learned to trace the night's disaster in his morning face."

Hickey was, indeed, a "character," and before I conclude this chapter I must record two other memories of the famous shop. Once my father, who retained his interest in the book shops almost to the end of his long life, saw on the stand outside a copy of the New Testament printed in a large and clear type—eminently suited to his failing eyesight. It was marked one shilling, and my father picked up the volume and carried it into the shop. "Two and sixpence!" said Hickey. "But it is priced one shilling," said my father. "Sir," said Hickey, with extraordinary dignity, "I am surprised that a man of your venerable appearance should underestimate the value of the Word of God." My father paid the half-crown.

On another occasion I was inside the premises when a very beautiful and distinguished lady—one who had done much work in the national cause—came in to purchase a little book which she had selected from the cart outside. Hickey recognised his beautiful customer, and with a superbly elegant bow handed back the proffered coin. "Madam," said he, "it is the least that I can offer to one who has done so much for my beloved country"—and the old humbug actually managed to get a tearful note into the concluding phrase.

SONG

By Maurice James Craig.

ALTHOUGH the lustre of your hair
Admits no parallel except
The leaves before the wind has swept
Them off and left the branches bare,
There's nothing worth the fetching there;
Though they may counterfeit your gold
They're crisp as paper, light as air,
And moulder, though it be to mould.

The folds of foliage, heavily hung,
That frame your features as they do
(Though coloured like enough) are new
Because the year and you are young.
So hush the lithe ingenious tongue
And let the suns of summer shine
Wandering in and out among
The tendrils of the burnished vine.

West Africa

The Lion and the Oil-Palm, and the Clash of Culture. By E. Udo Udoma. Dublin University Press. 1/- net.

THE first essay in this book is a reprint of the inaugural address delivered by Mr. Udoma in the 1942-43 session of the University Philosophical Society, when he was President of the Society. The occasion was an important one; for it was the first time that a native African had attained to such an office in a major society in Trinity College, and it is for that reason—because he speaks for the people from whom he springs—that Mr. Udoma's essay so well merits reprinting.

His subject is a review and criticism of British colonial administration—the application of the "trusteeship" implied in the Mandate system. The result is not favourable. Mr. Udoma shows the awkwardnesses of "Indirect Rule"—grafting external direction on to internal systems—attacks the exploitation of colonies and the parallel failure to educate and develop the people, speaks cynically of the flying-tour "Colonial expert," and contrasts French with British administration to the disadvantage of the latter. The voice throughout is the voice of experience. Nevertheless, it is noticeable that often his demand for rights is based on that very principle of "trusteeship" which he indicts.

It is possible to argue Mr. Udoma's views at length; he himself would be the first to welcome the discussion; but at least it cannot be denied that the essayist, as he hopes, "has stimulated sympathetic and intelligent thought as distinct from mere emotional pity, which is not what we Africans need." The accompanying essay, with which Mr. Udoma won his Society's medal, makes further contributions on similar topics.

Anthology Overseas

By Austin Clarke.

THE best modern anthology of Irish verse is unobtainable in this country. The collection was made by Padraic Colum and published in America about the year 1926, as far as I can remember. Soon after its publication I got a copy from Boston, and, in my enthusiasm, lent it to a friend. As a consequence of my rash act I have never seen this precious book again, but it has a shelf to itself in my memory. Arranged with much skill and an almost unerring instinct for the best, the anthology presented, within the range of our poetry, as complete a picture as possible of Ireland.

In his preface to the anthology Padraic Colum stressed the fact that Irish poetry in English is still little more than a century and a half old. Instead of tracing our poetry back, in the conventional way, to Anglo-Irish writers, such as Swift and Goldsmith, he sought its origins in the anonymous folk poetry of the eighteenth century. The development of our poetry, especially in recent times, proves that his contention is correct. Our poetry began with an extraordinary and gradual psychic change in the race itself—a change from the native language to the language of another country. Our first folk poems in the acquired language were crude attempts to echo and shape in English the sounds and internal rhyme-patterns of Gaelic poetry.

There's joy throughout the nation,
and great congratulation,
With wondrous acclamation, from the Liffey to the Lee.
Without exaggeration, our goalers
take their station,
For the highest approbation—they have won the victory;
'Twas in no combination, or field
association,
But in rural relaxation, on the plains or Onnabuoy.

It is generally assumed that the hedge schoolmasters and anonymous ballad-mongers who composed these popular poems were displaying their powers of vocabulary, and were, in fact, remote followers of Dr. Johnson. But an analysis of the range of vocabulary used by these folk poets would, I suggest, reveal some peculiarities. Anyone who has tried to reproduce the effect of a Gaelic poem in English finds that English vowel and consonant sounds are much thinner and lack grip. The thin sibilant "s" is a consonant which can be very distressing in English poetry; and, for that reason, Tennyson advised all poets to "wring the necks of the geese and throw them overboard." But in Gaelic poetry "s" is known as the queen of the consonants, and there is no equivalent in English for the rich Gaelic "sh" sound, except in the gradually compressed romance word-endings, such as "ation." The stanza just quoted is surely an attempt to echo one of the dominant sounds of Gaelic verse. The malice and destructiveness of our national wit have proved at times a useful corrective to the extravagances of our poetic aspirations. Our poetry was chased from the hedges by the genius of parody. Millikin's cruel masterpieces, "The Groves of Blarney" and "De Groves of de Pool," summarised the form, and, at the same time, killed it by ridicule.

Transition

The gradual blending of Irish tradition into English was accomplished, not by individual writers, but by the successive experiments of scholars and poet translators. This activity has extended over a century, can be paralleled in few countries, and is due purely to the historical circumstances which led to a complete change of language. It is a record of failures, new starts and sudden inspired successes; our translators have been a continuous school. Ernest Boyd has shown how Samuel Ferguson failed to capture in English the movement of a well-known folk poem—

The sun has set, the stars are still,
The red moon hides behind the hill;
The tide has left the brown beach bare,
The birds have left the upper air . . .

More than a half century later Thomas MacDonagh produced the perfect translation of this poem—

The stars stand up in the air,
The sun and the moon are gone,
The strand of its waters is bare,
And her sway is swept from the swan . . .

The use of assonantal measures in our own time is due to the experiments of Larminie in the late 'eighties. The muted music discovered by Larminie was ignored at the time, and the ideas which he expressed in a forgotten article were remembered only by A.E. Year in, year out, A.E. spoke of Larminie's experiments, until at last some of us really listened and understood. So our literary tradition works.

Dialect

It is a remarkable fact that in this "Anthology of Irish Verse" there are scarcely any "dialect" poems. Our best poems are devoid of this adventitious aid. "The Drover," by Colum; "The Gilly of Christ," by Campbell; the Dublin poems of Seamus O'Sullivan and James Stephens have in common a subtle, yet natural, speech of their own; and this heritage passed to F. R. Higgins and Padraic Fallon and others. Our poets proved wise in avoiding the easy triumphs of "brogue." Synge caught the last richness of western speech, and, with his powerful creative imagination, transformed it for his own purpose in prose. The rapid degeneration of our prose drama into kitchen farces and speech caricature shows what happens when the critical and traditional values of poetry disappear.

Colum sees our poetry, still patiently limited in its range, as the expression of a psychic adjustment between two languages, sometimes conscious, sometimes instinctive. His view is of especial interest at the present time, owing to the official attempt to force this country to be bilingual. It is too soon even to guess the effects of this mental disturbance of the country, but in another article I hope to deal with some of its immediate effects on modern Gaelic writing.

BLINDING HEADACHES MADE HER HELPLESS

Forced to Lie Down For Hours at a Time

Kruschen Put an End to Her Troubles

The severity of this woman's headaches can be easily imagined from her statement that she seemed to lose her sight, and all power in her hands. Other sufferers from headaches will be interested to read how she ended her troubles:—

"Until last summer I was subject to terrible headaches. While they lasted I seemed to lose my sight and all power in my hands, and was forced to lie down for hours at a time. My aunt (who has taken Kruschen Salts for 12 years with beneficial results) suggested my trying them. I did so, and I've not had any return of those terrible headaches for months; in fact, I feel quite cured. I shall always take Kruschen regularly in future."—(Mrs.) M.W.

Headaches can nearly always be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen Salts bring swift and lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aids Nature to cleanse your body completely of all poisons and harmful acids, which incidentally give rise to rheumatism and many other ills.

Kruschen Salts is sold by all Chemists, price 1/9 per bottle.
